ALL ABOARD for better bean dishes

KNOWING beans is the business of the modern cook. There are so many kinds and so many ways of preparing them that it is possible to have this good food in infinite variety. Even inventors have got busy and put on the market a very ingenious device for slicing string beans.

Canned beans are already sliced, tender and delicious to serve direct from the can. So are oven baked beans, limas, baby limas and many kinds of dry vegetables for uncharted islands of better fare — and take along those recipes as a bon voyage gift.

Stringless Beans with Beurre Noir: Heat one and one-half cups of canned stringless beans. Drain and pour into a hot serving dish. Melt one and one-half tablespoons butter. Heat and pour over the beans. Serve at once. This serves two persons.

Lima and Kidney Beans

Lima Beans En Casserole: Scald a small onion, chop fine and one shredded green pepper in one tablespoon butter. Add one cup tomatoes. Add the contents of one can of kidney beans. Season with salt and pepper. Pour into a buttered casserole and bake for thirty minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees). This serves six persons.

Beans stuffed Peppers: Cut off the stem ends of six green peppers and remove the seeds. Drain one No. 2 can of kidney beans, reserving the liquid, and add enough canned tomato soup to moisten well (about one-third or one-fourth of a can of soup). Fill the peppers with the mixture. Cut two slices of bacon in short pieces, and put one on top of each pepper. Place in a pan with a little hot water and bake at 375 degrees until tender. Heat together the remaining soup and the liquid from the beans, and serve over the peppers. This serves six persons.

Mrs. Murphy, of Gretna, was the guest of her son, F. L. Murphy last Sunday.

Miss Rosella Babcock, of Rustburg is spending this week with Mrs. H. C. Babcock.

• • •

Guests of Mrs. B. T. Lee Sunday were Mrs. R. A. Browning and children Lewis and Claire, Mr. and Mrs. George Nuchols, of Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Burnette and Mrs. Anna Lee, of Stonewall.

Wiley Morris returned home Tuesday from the Baptist hospital.

FARM AND STOCK EXHIBITS TO BE REVIVED AT STATE FAIR THIS YEAR

A Group of the 24 Pretty Dancing Girls who Shape the Colorful Numbers in "The World on Parade." Fifty People Take Part in the Big Revue

"WORLD ON PARADE" FEATURE OF ELABORATE 6-DAY ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM

A "Back to the Soil" movement marks the thirtieth annual Virginia State Fair which is to be held in Richmond the week of September 30 to October 5th, it is announced by General Manager Chas. A. Semmes.

All exhibit departments, temporarily dropped during the past two seasons, have been revived, and judging from entries which began pouring into the fair offices immediately following the release of the premium catalog, the exposition is to be featured by large displays of farm products, live stock, poultry, boys' and girls' 4-H club work, as well as a huge women's and children's department. More than $17,000 in prizes is offered exhibitors. Entries close September 21.

More than $3,000 has been expended in improving and beautifying the fair grounds and buildings this season. New entrances have been built, buildings have been improved and painted and a new, extended midway with mechanized rainbow has been constructed, for the comfort and enjoyment of the thousands of visitors who will thronge the grounds throughout the week.

An elaborate entertainment program, headed by the World on Parade," declared to be the most costly single feature ever presented at the fair, has been arranged. This four-part production, replete with color, interspersed with numerous musical numbers is to be presented on a specially constructed stage between the exhibition buildings. Besides vaudeville and circus

Four days of horse races, beginning Tuesday, October 1, and championship automobile races on Saturday, October 5th, are other attractions, in addition to a six-night Midway Carnival and a brilliant display of fireworks each night. Monday, as usual, is to be "Children's Day" at the fair, and all children under 16 years of age are to be admitted to the grounds free of charge, with half-price tickets offered to the grandstand and Midway attractions all day.

AMAZING HIGH-DIVING HORSE TO AGAIN THRILL STATE FAIR CROWDS

Remarkably Trained Animal, Mounted by a Daring Young Lady, Leaps Headlong Into 40-Foot Platform into a Shallow Tank.

"WORLD ON PARADE" IS BIG FEATURE

Amusing and Spectacular Vaudeville and Circus Acts Are Other Features on Elaborate 6-Day Entertainment Program.

Visitors to the Virginia State Fair, which is to be held in Richmond the week of September 30 to October 5, are to again experience the thrill of seeing a so-called "impossible" trick its life twice each day in a deliberate, voluntary forty-foot leap.

According to fair officials, and last year's fair patrons, the management has added to the fair's entertainment program a return engagement of Dr. Carl Hunt's High Diving Horse, which held the grandstand crowds breathless with excitement last season. Again, this remarkable mare will be seen to mount the runway to the wooden platform 40 feet in the air, and then, she will pause on its brink as a pretty young girl in spangled bathing attire backs down, and, again, the thousands of spectators will watch breathlessly as the animal leisurely looks from side to side, cautiously measures the distance, then deliberately leaps, head-first, into a small hole in the ground below, filled with only eleven feet of water.

The Diving Horse is but one of a score of entertainment features which have been engaged for the forthcoming exposition. Headed by a spectacular musical, dancing and comedy extravaganza, styled "The World on Parade," the program includes such attractions as "Brenghi's Golden Horse," the Six Arleys, Cobia Troupe, Alf Loyal's Dogs, the Honey Family, the Rellnut Troupe, and others. Spirale will be provided by Basile's son son Square Garden Band.

Won Honors

On Tuesday of last week four Appomattox 4H club boys, with J. B. Farrar, club agent, went to the state fair in Richmond and entered the 4H club poultry judging contest. The local team consisted of: Twyman Dinkins, Merwyn Williamson, Joseph Burnette and Carey Caldwell. J. B. Farrar, club agent, stated that he was pleased at the score made by the team, particularly the tine record made by Merwyn Williamson. He thinks that with some more practice, study and hard work, the team should place first next year. Appomattox placed fifth in the statewide contest and Merwyn Williamson was fifth in individual score, although many of the judges from other sections had had far more practice and experience than he.

Storing Chopped Hay

Considerable loss occurs about one-half to one-third the space needed for long hay. For this reason, advises a writer in Farmer, care must be taken to increase supports of many stores before chopped hay is stored since the weight of a mowful of chopped hay is considerably greater than the usual capacity weight of long hay. Since chopped hay has a tendency to heat more than long hay, it should be properly cured before it is stored.

Potatoes as Feed

Raw potatoes, even when clean and sound, are somewhat laxative and are somewhat laxative. Large allowances of potatoes, therefore, are likely to result in bloat and scouring, says the Montreal Herald. This difficulty is largely overcome by cooking the potatoes, especially for hog feeding. Such treatment also increases their palatability, and in general, makes them a safer feed. Where it is possible to do so, the water in which the potatoes were cooked should be discarded.

Vote On Program

A referendum on the question of whether there will be a corn and hog adjustment program in 1936 will be conducted among all corn and hog producers on Saturday October 26. The investigation by the agricultural administration, which included a hearing held in Washington on September 26 and 27, has shown economic justification for another program.

All operators and owners of farms which produced corn or hogs in 1935, whether or not they signed a 1934 or 1935 corn hog contract are eligible to vite in the referendum.

Removing Horns

Live horn has very little hollow space. When dried or dead the inner horn can be readily removed leaving the hollow outer shell. On the cow, says the Rural New-Yorker, horn is living tissue, and will bleed if cut sufficiently deep any place except near the tip. Some may cut the horn high with the mistaken idea it is more humane; actually it decreases bleeding very little if any. Cut the horn close to the head taking a thin ring of skin all the way around.

Farm Water Systems

Using pipe that is too small is one of the commonest mistakes in farm water systems, says A. G. Tyler, agricultural engineer, Minnesota University Farm. Ordinarily, one-inch pipe is the smallest that should be used. Small pipe cuts down the pressure tremendously between the pressure tank and the point of delivery.

Value of Proved Sires

As all dairymen know, it is not difficult to find a registered bull that will materially increase the productive capacity of his daughters above that of their dams, so long as the latter do not produce more than 250 pounds of butterfat a year. But when a herd of cows has been developed to the point where their average yearly production reaches 400 pounds, the finding of a bull that is good enough to even maintain that production is a real problem.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Ventilated Crib Helps Save Corn

Late Maturing Crop May Be Salvaged if Properly Dried, Cured.

By W. A. Foster, Rural Architect, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Since much of the corn crop was late in maturing, cribs which not only protect the grain but give it plenty of ventilation for drying and curing will save what might otherwise be heavy losses.

Facilities for adequate ventilation can be built into new cribs or added to those which will be undergoing repairs this fall. In addition to plenty of air circulation, the crib should protect the grain against bad weather and keep rats, mice and other destructive rodents away from the corn.

In figuring the amount of space needed, the farmer can base his estimate on the fact that each corn requires two and a half cubic feet to the bushel when shelled corn or small grain requires just half that much. This means that a crib 10 feet wide and 10 feet high will hold 90 bushels of ear corn to each foot of length. The most convenient length is 36 to 40 feet.

Since it is better to have all of the crib room at one location rather than scattered about the farmstead, the "growing plan" is ideal, especially for the young farmer who is just starting to build up his place. One crib may be built on the selected site this fall. Later on another unit may be added facing the first and with a driveway between. As small grain bins are needed they may be built above the cribs and the roof finally completed.

Either wood or concrete floors are satisfactory for corn cribs if properly constructed. However, extra care should be taken to "build out" the rats. This can be done by placing a strip of half-inch mesh hardware cloth around the edge of the crib between the studding and the outside wall. This strip should reach from the floor to about 2 feet up on the walls and be topped with a strip of galvanized iron bent outward to prevent the rats from getting through the wall above the strip of hardware cloth.

Hogging Down Corn Found to Be Satisfactory Plan

Practical feeders and experiment stations have shown that hogs properly managed will gain as rapidly and as economically when allowed to harvest the corn crop as when the crop is harvested and fed in the usual manner, says the Indiana Farmer's Guide.

For hogging down corn most feeders prefer well grown but thin sheats weighing from 125 to 150 pounds. Sheats that have been grown through the summer on forage and have not been practically fed a heavy grain ration. Such hogs will eat a large amount of feed and will gain rapidly. Heavier hogs such as bread sows and fattening hogs almost finished are likely to break down too much corn, and to clean it up as well as they go along, thereby increasing the waste.

Some farmers turn in a few sows until sheats learn how to break down the corn, but take the sows out before they become too fat. It is also a common practice to move the fattening hogs to a new area before the corn is entirely cleaned up, and follow them with sows and smaller pigs. Such management insures minimum waste.

Collective farmers of Minsk province, U. S. S. R., have drained more than 225,000 acres of swamp to make farm land.

LEGION COMMANDER

Ray Murphy, an attorney of Iowa Grove, Iowa, was elected national commander of the American Legion at the convention in St. Louis. Mr. Murphy served on the Mexican border and in the World war and has been active in the affairs of the Legion. He has been acting as chairman of the organization's national commission on American eanization.

Fox Hunters Dance

The annual fox hunters ball is to be held tonight at the local hotel.

Music will be furnianed by the Southside Serenaders.

There will be a sluare dance at the drug store hall Friday night.

Hospital

Judging by figures contained in the reports of the Southside Community hospital for August, 1935, the latest available, monthly report, and the figures for August, 1928, during the first year the hospital was operated, this community institution has greatly broadened its field of service. The total number of patient days care during August 1935 amounted to 969, of which 216 days were free, work. During August 1928 the total number of patient days amounted to 519, of which 2 days were free, work. The term, patient days, means the number of days service rendered by the hospital.

In August 1935 ambulatory patients numbered 35, while in August 1928, the number of ambulatory patients were 11. In August 1935 the number of visits to the outpatient department of the hospital was 291, while in August of the first year of the hospital the number was 38. More striking still is the fact that at the end of the last August 1184 patients were under the car, of the outpatient department. As to the number of operations during the two periods, in the last August there were 106 performed in the hospital, while in August 1928 the number totaled 47. In August 1935, 11 babies were delivered in the institution, while in 1928 the report showed no babies delivered in the hospital.
